

Kenan Drugzani - Head of School, LDE UTC

Kenan brings a wealth of leadership experience across secondary education, where he has driven whole-school initiatives in data, personal development, behaviour, learning attitudes, curriculum development, careers education, and industry partnerships. Since joining London Design and Engineering UTC in January 2018 as Assistant Principal, Kenan has led the “Behaviour and Attitudes” provision, a role in which he has been commended in Ofsted reports in October 2018 and March 2022. His impact extended to Post-16 Education, including apprenticeship programme, with a focus on improving achievement and attainment.

As of September 2024, Kenan is leading LDE UTC as Head of School, collaborating closely with the CEO and Board of Directors to drive UTC values and cultivate meaningful employer partnerships that enhance learner outcomes. His educational background includes an undergraduate degree in Biochemistry from Saint Cloud State University, Minnesota, USA and a Master’s in Education Leadership from UCL (2016).

His commitment to advancing educational impact is further highlighted by his NPQSL (2018) from UCL, NPQH (2023) from Ambition Institute, and his ongoing Doctorate in Education at the University of Buckingham, where he studies partnership models between UTCs and employers to strengthen skills, employability, and learner success.

Kenan is passionate about enhancing pastoral standards across LDE UTC, ensuring high achievement and progress for all learners while focusing on closing gaps among diverse learner groups. Originally from Kosovo, he is fluent in Kosovan/Albanian and enjoys table tennis in his spare time.
